WM.L.AMMON SUICIDES IN HIS STABLE

York County's District Attorney Kills himself when it is Found that there is Large Shortage in Accounts of Building Association of which he is Secretary.

Special to The Times.

York, August 25—William L. Ammon, District Attorney of York County, was found dead this morning in the stable at his home in this place. Death is supposed to have been caused by theman taking a dose of Cyanide of Potassium though physicians pronounced his death due to Heart Failure.

It is reported that State Examiners found a heavy deficit in the accounts of the Standard Building and Loan Association of which Mr. Ammon was the Secretary for the past 15 years. It is supposed that this caused the man to perform the rash act. No figures have been given out by the state authorities to show the amount of the shortage but it is reported to be large.

Last evening he purchased a pound of Cyanide of Potassium. It is supposed that he bought such a large quantity in order that there might be no suspicion that he would use the deadly poison for such a purpose.

The body was found during the morning and doctors were summoned immediately but life was already extinct. A very careful examination was performed with the above result.

William L. Ammon is widely known and has many friends in Gettysburg. He graduated from Gettysburg College in 1893 and was prominent in all branches of college activity while here. He was a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and it was largely through his efforts that the handsome three story structure on North Washington street now occupied by that fraternity, was erected.

He was a prominent York attorney and for the past two years has been that county's District Attorney.

Rumors concerning his death were very conflicting. The first was that he had shot himself and later that he had been kicked to death by a horse. Both of these were false as there was no mark of violence on his body. A number of distant relatives of the well known man live here.

MYSTERIOUS FIND

Mount Tabor, August 25—Much interest was manifested in this vicinity over the finding of a hat a few days ago, near Hunters Run. In the hat was a slip of paper upon which was written "You will find my body in the creek." We are glad to state that no one from our community has been missing.

COUNTRY STORE BURGLARIZED

Young Residents of Vicinity of Round Top Commit Depredations in that Vicinity, are Caught by Detective Wilson and Plead Guilty.

Breaking into and robbing a country store, making a "money or your life" threat to a man no dark night at a quiet spot, and contemplating poisoning and robbing a blind resident of the county are a few of the things of which Charles Cassatt aged 16, and Milton Leo Claybaugh, aged 18, both residents of near Round Top, are charged.

Both boys were arrested on Tuesday evening in Gettysburg by Detective Wilson, charged with burglarizing the store of David Weikert near Round Top on Monday night and taking from it some cigars, tobacco, cakes, candy and pop. This morning they were given a hearing before Squire Hill and after hearing all the evidence produced against them pleaded guilty and will be sentenced at Saturday's session of Court.

The boys broke three doors in order to get into the store, smashing the window in one, tearing off part of another and damaging a third with a ladder used as a battering ram. They took no money and their liberality with the goods they took played a great part in producing incriminating evidence. Detective Wilson found traces of fresh paint on their clothes and it was this that made the young culprits confess, as the building had been freshly painted and they knew the presence of the paint was damaging to them.

The youngsters have evidently been hearing tales of the terrible West, for the past few days have brought stories about them which would do credit to a most experienced highwayman. Their plan, it is alleged, was to rob the store, sell the goods and then run away. This they are supposed to have told to some of the residents of the section in which they live.

The hold up above referred to took place a few nights ago when Jacob Group was stopped at a dark spot while returning home from Rider's Store. He had bought some groceries there in the evening and the Cassatt boy saw him put his money bag into his trousers pocket. The boy left the store ahead of Mr. Group and when the latter reached a quiet place suddenly grabbed him near the throat and called out

"Your money or your life."

Mr. Group was somewhat frightened but looking closely saw who the boy was and told him he recognized him and that he should get out. The boy only tightened his grip but soon subsided when his would be victim told him that he would better stop to keep out of trouble.

Neighbors claim that they have heard the boys talking of way laying Mr. Weikert who is blind, "doping" him and robbing the man while unconscious. None of these charges have been pressed, however, and will not be used against the boys when they come up for sentence.

Claybaugh, the older of the boys, is the son of Milton Claybaugh, who is now serving a term in the Eastern Penitentiary charged with forgery. Cassatt is the son of Jefferson Cassatt.

HARRIMAN BACK FROM EUROPE

Extraordinary Home Coming of Railroad Builder.

FINANCIERS MARKED TIME

Turned Their Faces Seaward For Glimpse of Man Whose Illness Furnished Much Material For Stock Market Rumors—Is Feeble and Gaunt—Talks Freely to Reporters.

New York, Aug. 25.—Edward Harriman, genius of finance, leader of men and master builder of railroads, came back to the United States while the financial world stood on its tiptoes in anxiety and expectancy. He came back as he left on June 1 last—a sick, tired man, seeking health. Surrounded by his family and physicians at his magnificent, though uncompleted, summer home at Arden on the Hudson, he has begun the after cure after the baths and dieting he underwent at Bad Gastein. How long he will remain in seclusion; how long it will be before he resumes the active direction of his vast railroad interests depends solely upon his health. He arrived, feeble, face gaunt and voice weak. "And I have come home," he said, "for a cure and not for work."

Many great Americans have returned to their country's shores under extraordinary circumstances, but never has there been a more remarkable homecoming of a private citizen than E. H. Harriman's. Great stock market operators paused as his ship drew near, the stock market itself marked time, and the financial world turned its eyes seaward eager for a glimpse of the face of the man whose illness abroad has furnished much material for stock market rumors.

Talked Freely to Reporters.
Mr. Harriman talked freely to newspapermen. He discussed things trivial and pertinent, and spoke lightly of the trying ordeals which physicians had prescribed for him abroad.

Turning to railroad matters, one of the first questions asked concerned his reported option on a controlling interest in New York Central stock, an option which would give him, with his other railroads, an unbroken line of steel east and west from coasts to coasts.

"That is an easy one," said the financier, "but I would not tell you if I had. I expect to find more officeholders than stockholders now," he said.

EDWARD H. HARRIMAN.

"There are more new laws, and they never seem to displace the old ones. New laws means new officeholders to administer them."

"Do you refer to the corporation tax?" he was asked.

"Yes—and some interstate laws," was the reply. Legislation seemed to arouse his interest greatly, and warming to his subject, he threw aside caution, rose from his pillow and sat up on the couch.

"Three years ago I was called a speculator," he said. "That was when Union Pacific was placed on a 10 per cent dividend basis. I had a hard time convincing my associates to realize that we were building, not better than we knew, but quicker than we knew."

"Do you mean to put the surplus earnings into the roads rather than to turn them over to the stockholders?" he was asked.

"Yes, that's about it," he said. "That is my plan—construction and development. But," said he, "it is in my mind to open up new territory and to build new tributary lines. This means new settlements and more people."

This attitude he emphasized all through his talk of railroad matters, leaving the inference that he contemplated improvements rather than increased dividends. In this connection the action of the directors of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific roads is significant. Both met, but declared only the regular dividends.

WESTERN RAILROADS WIN INJUNCTION

U. S. Circuit Court Decides Missouri River Rate Case.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Manufacturers and producers generally of the territory lying between Buffalo, Pittsburg and Parkersburg on the east and the Mississippi river on the west are regarded as the greatest beneficiaries by the majority decision of the United States circuit court permanently enjoining the interstate commerce commission from enforcing its seaboard and Missouri river through rate in the famous Missouri river rate case. The opinion of Judges Grosscup and Kohlman (Judge Baker dissenting), if sustained by the supreme court of the United States, will greatly entail the power of the commission over transportation rates, restricting it to a sort of police court adjudication of specific cases of discrimination. The rate making power remains in the hands of the railroads.

The Missouri river cities, which would have profited had the commission's order been allowed to go into effect, will be benefited by the court's ruling in the Denver rate case, in which a temporary restraining order was issued.

This case and the Missouri river case are similar in principle.

ROBBED BY MASKED MEN

Batter In Door of Veteran's House and Attack Him and Daughter.

Williamsport, Pa., Aug. 25.—Edward Williams, a war veteran of Beech Creek, west of here; his wife and daughter were made victims of one of the boldest outrages ever perpetrated in this section.

Three masked men with a railroad tie battered in the door of Williams' house while the members of the family were sleeping. In the excitement Mrs. Williams managed to escape.

The man and his daughter were seized and bound. One man covered them with revolvers, while the others searched the house. They found $207 that the veteran had saved from his meager pension.

Smoked Himself to Death.

Pottsville, Pa., Aug. 25.—Believing that he could with safety smoke a dozen packages of cigarettes, Michael Sculler, of 310 West Railroad street, tried the experiment for several days. He was found dead in bed. The deputy coroner, O. J. Carlin, who investigated, found heart failure from excessive smoking the cause of death.

White Plague Kills Metal Polishers.
Cincinnati, O., Aug. 25.—"Sixty-three per cent of the mortality among the metal polishers in the last two years in this country was due to tuberculosis," declared Charles R. Atherton, secretary of the Metal Polishers' and Buffers' International union, in his annual report.

Claims He Was Assaulted; Shot Two.
Mount Carmel, Pa., Aug. 25.—Felix Kessler gave himself up to the authorities, after having shot Mrs. Jacob Tyson in the body and also shattering her husband's leg with a bullet after they had, he alleges, viciously assaulted him on a mountain road near Arleton on account of a personal spite.

BOYS PLAYING INDIAN BURN LAD AT STAKE

Put Out Fire When He Screams and Lock Him in Shed.

Selinsgrove, Pa., Aug. 25.—Cruelly tortured by a band of boys playing Indians, thirteen-year-old Paul Kepner is a nervous wreck at the home of his parents in Millersburg. Kepner says a dozen boys captured him and, binding his feet and hands, dragged him to a telegraph pole. There they laced him to the upright. One of the lads then packed newspapers around Kepner's feet and another applied a lighted match.

Their victim's screams so frightened the tormentors that they stamped out the flames and released Kepner, only to lock him in a coal shed. Then they continued their "war dance" around the imprisoned youth.

Finally Kepner succeeded in getting a pitchfork, and with it forced his way to freedom.

THE DEACON'S DAY.

By M. QUAD.

(Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

Deacon Hardstone of Riverton was a good man. He was a man of years and dignity. He was a man always to be found on the side of law and order and charity. The only thing in this world that troubled him and his good wife was the fact that they had a nephew over at Saltville who was a loud young man. Money had been left him by an aunt, and he sported. He not only sported at home, despite the protests of his widowed mother, but he came over to Riverton and sported there. The deacon struggled and struggled with him, but it did no good. He would drink cocktails, and he would speed his auto around the town and on the highways, and finally he was ordered out of the deacon's house and told never to return. Then the sporty youth began to study how to get even.

Now, the deacon had a weakness for sweet cider, though he didn't go telling it around. When cider making time came he carted apples to the mill and had one barrel of cider made—never more. The cider would retain its sweetness for about a month. When it began to get an edge on it, it was provided with "mother" and rolled aside to become vinegar.

Of course this little one barreled affair was known to the nephew, and after a little thought he saw his way clear. When the apples and the barrel had been taken to the mill he was ready with his plot. Perhaps he had the aid of the owner of the mill, but that has never been satisfactorily settled. There are thirty-two gallons of cider in the average barrel. How many gallons of something else went into the barrel has not yet been solved by Sherlock Holmes. It was sufficient, no matter what the number.

When the deacon went after his barrel it was ready for him, and never did a cider barrel look more innocent. It was rolled down cellar to cool and was not tapped until the afternoon of the next day. Then the deacon's wife went out to visit a neighbor, and he put a spigot in the barrel and drew a glass to drink. He had been drinking cider for twenty-three years, but never did cider taste like that before. It had a peculiar taste. It had an agreeable taste. The palate just cried out for more. The deacon gave it more. He was a little bit frightened when he found himself laughing, for he had not laughed for sixteen years by the almanac, but he drew another glass and slowly sipped it and figured that he must have mixed a lot of Seek No Further apples in with the pippins. At any rate, he wasn't going to seek any further for a good thing. Who can tell just how many glasses of sweet cider a man will drink under favorable conditions? You can't even guess at it.

When Deacon Hardstone ascended from the cellar his eyes were shining and his hair curling. He put on his hat and walked out to the gate, wondering why his heels were so springy, and down by the postoffice he saw an auto. It was the one belonging to his sporty nephew. He walked down there to give the young man a blast; but, not finding him, he was seized with a sudden desire to take a ride all by his lonesome. He had been shown how to start and stop the machine. Before leaving in he whooped. He didn't mean to whoop, but the whoop sorter whooped itself. Then he whooped again as he started off.

The town of Riverton will never forget that day. In fact, it is observed as a sort of holiday under the name of "deacon's day." He put that auto at its fastest clip and went up and down the four or five streets. He drove everybody within doors. He immobilized twenty different runaways. He whooped at the corners, and he whooped in the middle of the blocks. Sometimes he whooped and swung his hat at the same time.

When this happened the machine either grazed a tree or took to the sidewalk and cleared off the kerosene barrels in front of the groceries. Of course it was plain that something was wrong, and a hundred people would have extended help if they could, but the trouble was they couldn't.

But they stopped the deacon at last. They piled dry goods boxes on the street and ran him into a millinery store and captured him. He was still whooping, but he didn't fight back when they carried him home and put him to bed. Of course there was something done about it. No deacon can perform that way after so many years of probity without a bit of scandal following. He had to toe the mark before his church. He was dimly conscious that he had drunk too much cider, and he intended to own up like a man and ask that the contents of the barrel be investigated. He was saved from this, however. A brother deacon suggested that he submit his head for medical examination, and the suggestion was followed. A doctor felt of his bumps, asked him a lot of questions and then made a medical report to the effect:

"This is to certify that I have carefully examined into the mental condition of Deacon Hardstone, and I find that his late performance was begot, superinduced, encouraged and finally developed by what is known to alienists as a brainstorm. I don't think he'll be dangerous again for several years to come."

And after the charges against the deacon had been dropped he went home and said to his wife:

"Should our nephew Henry call and ask to be forgiven for drinking cocktails I think we'll try and do it, and tomorrow I'll knock the bung out of that barrel and let it begin to sour."

NO MORE GRAY HAIR

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made and used a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair, and are fast following suit. The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready to use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur As a scalp tonic and color restorer, this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers, and it can be bought for 50 cents and $1 a bottle at almost any first-class drug store, or will be sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price. For sale and recommended by People's Drug Store.

BABY'S PITIFUL CASE OF ECZEMA

Summer Rash Became a Dreadful Itching Humor—Big Blisters Formed and Skin Grew as Hard and Rough as Bark—Scratched and Tore Flesh till Blood Ran.

ALMOST MAGIC CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"Our son, two years old, was very much afflicted with a breaking out or what looked to be a summer rash. I applied the usual remedies, such as washing with soda water and powdering with boric acid. Finally, after he suffered with the trouble several weeks I took him to the doctor. He said it was merely a rash that was quite prevalent, and that I was giving the right treatment and that I should just continue it and the baby would soon be all right. But instead of getting better it was getting worse. The rash ran together and made large blisters. The little fellow didn't want to do anything but scratch and we had to wrap his hands up to keep him from it as he would tear the flesh open till the blood would run. The itching was intense, causing loss of appetite and flesh. When it seemed to hurt him most the skin on his back became hard and rough like the bark of a tree so that rubbing or brushing would not break it. He was so feverish that I thought it a bad case of eczema. He could not wear any clothes but a little nightgown with the sleeves just fastened at the top of the shoulder. He suffered intensely for about three months. But I found a remedy in Cuticura Soap for bathing and Cuticura Ointment with which I anointed the sore places. This kept the rash from spreading and in less than a week the result was almost magical. That was more than two years ago and there has not been the slightest symptom of it since he was cured. I am never very long without Cuticura Soap as my family knows the value of it and don't like a substitute. J. W. Lauck, Yukon, Okla., Aug. 28 and Sept. 17, '08."

Millions of women throughout the world use Cuticura Soap and Ointment for eczemas, rashes, itchings, irritations, inflammations, chafings, pimples, blackheads, dandruff, dry, itching and falling hair, sensitive, anti-septic cleansing, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath and nursery.

AIRSHIP MAKES THRILLING FLIGHT

Dives 350 Feet and Then Turns Upward.

BEATS A RAILROAD TRAIN

Paulham Performs Wonderful Feats Before French President—Rose to Height of 500 Feet.

Rheims, Aug. 25.—Paulham, in his Voisin aeroplane, turned to the spectacular, and with the president of France gazing on in wonder, this daring man performed as thrilling a bunch of stunts as one could wish for. After distancing an express train in a short race, Paulham sent his machine 350 feet into the air. A few minutes later the aeroplane's nose was pointed straight to the earth. Down came the flyer; down like a great bird swooping upon its prey. He dropped at terrible speed, and so convinced were many women that he was shooting to his death that they fainted.

When within twenty feet of the earth the nifty Paulham threw over a lever, the aeroplane turned upward and the great crowd saw how complete was man's mastery over the air.

Another feature of the day was Bleriot's smashing of the record for six miles. His time was 8 minutes 4 2/5 seconds. But this was commonplace compared with Paulham's work.

Paulham doffed his hat as he passed the box occupied by President Fallieres, at a height of 100 feet.

After he had rounded the turn and was racing down the backstretch a railroad train came along the track under him, moving in the same direction. Paulham gradually overtook the train and passed it. Returning to the tribune he ascended to the dizzy height of 350 feet and passed over the tiers of seats at this altitude. He waved his cap in response to the enthusiastic cheering of the spectators, who a moment later held their breath as the machine was caught by a gust of wind and he keeled over to a dangerous angle. But the intrepid pilot righted his aeroplane promptly and continued his flight. He made the round in 12 minutes and 13 seconds.

Without appreciably coming down from this great altitude, Paulham completed his second and third rounds of the course. As he approached the finish he descended suddenly. Many of the spectators thought he was falling, and cries of horror went up from the crowd, but when at a distance of twenty feet from the ground the biplane righted and crossed the line on an even keel, and at once again rose into the air.

After a couple of spectacular circles in front of the tribune Paulham came to the ground in front of the tiers of seats amid thunders of applause. His was the most remarkable feat of aviation yet witnessed here, and as he stepped out of his machine the frenzied excitement broke out in three rousing cheers.

RIOT VICTIMS BURIED

Three More Bodies Found While Strikers Bury Their Dead.

Pittsburg, Aug. 25.—Gloom covered the little manufacturing village of McKees Rocks like a pall when long funeral processions wended their way from the Greek Catholic church to St. Mary's cemetery, a small burying place just outside Schoenerville. Strikers and their families crowded in the van of these funeral trains bearing an air of deep grief.

The finding of three more bodies of terribly beaten strike sympathizers was also horrifying in its ghastliness, for troopers, detailed to the work of searching for dead and wounded, made little effort to spare the feelings of the men who gathered about them when the bodies, two under a pile of railroad timbers and one under a culvert on the tracks of the Pittsburg & Lake Erie railroad were pulled into sight. The corpses, hardly recognizable as those of human beings, were hastily piled into a morgue wagon and turned over to the county officials.

BLIND MAN SAVES BOY

Reached Drowning Lad by Following His Cries.

Atlantic City, Aug. 25.—John Robinson, a fisherman, who is almost blind as a result of an accident that destroyed one of his eyes, plunged into the thoroughfare and rescued ten-year-old Morris Hughes, who had fallen from a bridge. Robinson reached the lad by following his cries, and then asked the people on shore to call to him to guide him back to the bank.

of the earth's surface. He is now planning to ascend Mount Everest, in the Himalayas, a feat which no man has as yet accomplished, although several attempts have been made to reach the crest of the great peak. Everest's summit is, roughly, five miles above sea level.

The duke recently climbed Mount Goodwin-Austin, in the same range, which is a close rival of the blue ribbon peak, and is confident of success in his new undertaking.

NEGRO RAN AMUCK; SHOT 29 PERSONS

Fired at Every Person in Sight and is Finally Killed.

Monroe, La., Aug. 25.—Angered, it is believed, because two of his friends had recently been shot by police officers in this city, William S. Wade, a negro, ran amuck on the principal business street of Monroe with a double-barreled shotgun, shooting first at every white man he saw, and then firing indiscriminately at every object before him.

The fire was returned, and the negro finally fell dead with a bullet through his heart, but not before twenty-nine men, three of them members of his own race, had been more or less seriously wounded.

Wade's body was publicly burned after it had been cut down from a pole on which it hung half an hour after he was killed. An investigation showed that when Wade purchased the shotgun and a box of shells a few minutes before he opened fire on the first white man that there was nothing in his manner to cause alarm. Other negroes who were with him say that he had not been drinking.

One Dead, Many Hurt in Trolley Crash

Philadelphia, Aug. 25.—One man was killed, two seriously injured, and a dozen or more sustained minor hurts when two trolley cars loaded with passengers collided at Fifteenth and York streets. Howard Smith, twenty-eight years old, was thrown under the wheels of one car from the running board of the other, and sustained injuries from which he died within fifteen minutes.

Boy Killed Wrestling With Brother.

Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 25.—Paul Cassidy, eleven years old, is dead as the result of a wrestling match with a younger brother. Paul was kicked in the stomach and received internal wounds. He was one of a family of ten children.

DEVELOPING THE HEIFER.

The development of the dairy heifer begins with its feeding when a calf. If the calf is well nourished and kept healthy it should develop a good appetite and should early learn to eat hay and other roughage. Hay should always be provided plentifully, as this bulky food tends to promote and develop the digestive system of the young animal. It is always well also to feed the grain mixed with cottonseed hulls if possible, as this makes a lighter feed and one that will be better masticated and digested. Some animals are somewhat dainty as to their feed and do not eat with the relish that should always be noticeable in the healthy and well nourished animals. This is usually a result of a disorganized condition of the digestive system and should be corrected without delay, as it may soon become a fixed habit.

The animal that has a poor appetite will never be a profitable dairy animal. Care should be exercised in feeding not to overfeed. It is always a safe proposition to feed twice a day as much grain as will be consumed in half an hour and as much hay as will be eaten in two hours. If any feed is left in the rack or manger it should be removed, and the next feeding should be reduced to correspond to the needs and appetite of the animal. To feed more than an animal will consume in two hours is wasteful. It is a safe proposition to feed as much as an animal will consume and still wish for more, but if more is fed than will be consumed the appetite for the next meal is decreased and the animal will soon be refusing to eat at all, or, as the common expression is, will be "off its feed."

The best results in developing heifer calves are secured by feeding plenty of good bright alfalfa or cowpea or peanut hay during the first season in connection with sweet skim milk and a grain ration consisting of equal parts by weight of bran, oats and shelled corn mixed with cottonseed hulls. The calves may be allowed the run of a small Bermuda grass pasture, but the best development of the calf will be secured by keeping it on a dry feed ration during the first season, especially if it is born later than the 1st of May. If it is turned out under a false idea of economizing, the young thing suffers much from the heat and flies and the grass being short and insufficient or too coarse to be relished, the calf is stunted in its growth. It begins the first winter in poor condition, and it never fully recovers from the setback.

When well cared for and nourished during the first season a sufficient growth and development will result so that the young heifer may be bred when not over fifteen or eighteen months old and be ready to take a place in the herd when she is two years old or at least not later than when she is thirty months old. This early breeding requires early development, which can only be secured by extra care and attention and an abundance of wholesome and nutritious food that will produce plenty of bone and lean meat, but not an excess of fat. The tendency to get fat should never be encouraged, yet a continuous, steady growth is always desirable, and any check or setback is harmful to the future usefulness of the animal.

Early breeding is desirable as it tends to develop the milk producing function in connection with the growth and development of the animal body. If your cow is to give more milk than the needs of nature demand the milk producing function in its growth and development must be balanced against the development of other parts of the body. If delayed until the animal is fully matured it will always remain in a somewhat dormant condition.

The illustration shows a cheap calf stanchion used by many dairymen. The stanchion is three feet high, and the distance from center to center is one and one-half feet. The stanchion is built off the ground on a board platform so as to prevent the ground becoming muddy in rainy weather. This could easily be built as a panel in a fence between two posts, or, as we have it arranged in our calf shed in the college, along one side of the stalls.

Practically as good results can be obtained from raising calves on skim milk, with the addition of some grain substitutes, as will be secured where the calves are allowed to run with the cow. Some very interesting exhibits have been carried on at the different experiment stations with beef animals, and it was found that at the age of two years there was very little difference that could be detected in the calves raised with the cow and those raised on skim milk.—Charles H. Alvord, Professor of Agriculture, Texas A. and M. College, in Farm and Ranch.

STEAMERS CRASH AND 200 DROWN

Argentine Excursion Boat Goes Down at Montevideo.

ONLY FEW PASSENGERS SAVED

Was Crowded With Women and Children Bound For a Festival—Majority of Survivors Are Men—Scores of Bodies Recovered.

Montevideo, Aug. 25.—In a driving rainstorm the Argentine excursion steamer Colombia and the North German Lloyd steamer Schlesien collided at the entrance of Montevideo harbor. The Colombia was entering port and the Schlesien was outward bound for Bremen. The Colombia's bow was crushed in and she sank almost immediately. Between 150 and 200 persons were killed or drowned.

The Colombia carried about 300 passengers and a crew of forty-eight men. Most of the passengers were asleep, and panic followed the crash. Almost immediately small boats put out to the sinking steamer, but the work of rescue was rendered very difficult by the high sea. About seventy persons were brought ashore. Most of the dead are women and children. A majority of the survivors are men.

The Colombia was carrying excursionists from Buenos Ayres to a festival at Montevideo.

The Schlesien, which was only slightly damaged, has been detained here by the port authorities. Her commander attributes the collision to the wind and the high seas, which made both steamers almost unmanageable. The channel is now partially obstructed by the wreck of the Colombia. Most of the survivors of that vessel were taken from the masts, and many of them were injured.

While great numbers of women and children were drowned, almost every one of the ship's complement was saved.

Scores of bodies have been recovered and are now lying at the custom house, but many of them have not been identified.

TRUSTS "DEAD BUT LIVING"

"Holding Companies" Do the Same Work Even Better.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 25.—Holding companies do and are designed to do exactly what was done by the "trusts," which now are obsolete, according to Frederick W. Lehmann, president of the American Bar association.

The excise tax upon corporations at the special session of congress has a significance far beyond its revenue features, he believes.

Mr. Lehmann expressed these opinions in his address at the thirty-second annual meeting of the American bar association. "This excise tax is of highest importance as the opening door to regulation which will broaden with the years," he predicted.

"Nobody now is so ignorant or so defiant of law as to think of forming one," said he, "and it is very easy to do much better. Out of the ashes of the 'trust' has sprung the holding company, the 'trust' in an improved, perfected form.

"The holding company does what was done by the 'trust,' and does it more efficiently. Is it under the ban of the law? Certainly not in all of the states."

MRS. GOULD IS NOW FREE

Husband Barred by Decree From Marrying During Her Lifetime.

New York, Aug. 25.—Mrs. Helen Kelly Gould obtained her final decree of divorce from Frank J. Gould. The interlocutory decree was signed on May 20 of this year. There was no opposition when Mrs. Gould's attorney made a formal application to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich for the final papers.

The decree gives the custody of the two children, Helen and Dorothy, to each parent for six months in each year. Mr. Gould is not permitted to remarry in this state until after the death of his wife. The papers do not mention alimony.

Road Roller Wrecks Trolley.

New York, Aug. 25.—Several passengers, the majority of whom were women, were badly injured when an unmanageable steam roller crashed into the trolley car in which they were on their way from Long Island City to Flushing. The car was overturned. Few of the passengers escaped without some injury, and three women were taken from the wreckage unconscious.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Extraordinary Hair Tonic
It Won't Grow Hair on Bald Heads
Unlike all other hair restorers, Parisian Sage won't grow hair on bald heads. Neither will it grow hair on china eggs, door knobs or hitching posts.
One claim is about as sensible as the other.
If your head is bald and you want to cover it with hair, get a wig.
Parisian Sage, the quick-acting hair rejuvenator, is of no use to bald headed people; but for people who have thin hair, falling hair and dandruff, and where the bald spot is just beginning to show, there is nothing in this wide world that will give such satisfactory results as Parisian Sage.
Parisian Sage is guaranteed by People's Drug Store to drive out dandruff and stop falling hair in two weeks, or money back. It stops itching scalp in two days, and keeps the scalp cool and free from odors in warm weather.
There is nothing on earth that will so quickly turn dull, faded hair into lustrous and luxuriant hair as Parisian Sage.
Try a bottle of Parisian Sage at People's Drug Store risk. Use it for a week, and you will have no use for the ordinary tonics. Parisian Sage is delightfully perfumed, free from grease and stickiness, and a large bottle costs but 50 cents. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

Makes pure soap and saves money besides. A 10-cent can of Banner Lye, 5½ pounds of kitchen grease, ten minutes' easy work (no boiling or large kettles), and you have 10 pounds of best hard soap or 20 gallons of soft soap.

Wanted Sympathy.
To the leader of a band in a small city, familiarly spoken of in its locality as "the worst in seven different states," there once came a man with a request that the band play at a cousin's funeral.
"Is it a military funeral?" asked the leader.
"Not at all," was the reply. "My cousin was no military man. In fact, he was never even interested in matters military. Nevertheless it was his express wish that your band should play at his funeral."
The leader was surprised and flattered. "Is that so?" he asked.
"Yes," responded the other. "He said he wanted everybody in town to be sorry that he died."

A PROPOSAL IN THREE LANGUAGES.

By F. A. MITCHEL.
[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

On Lake Como, in northern Italy, is a little cluster of hotels and shops called Bellagio. The place is near the boundary line between two countries, in one of which French is spoken and in the other Italian. English Americans, French, Italians and Germans all meet here, and the lingual condition is similar to that at the famous tower of Babel. The hotel and shop keepers, boatmen and others are obliged to continually express themselves in one of three or four languages. French is the prevailing tongue, with English second and German third.
After having finished my education I decided upon a year's travel in Europe before beginning the practice of my profession, and that summer at the height of the Italian lake season I found myself at Bellagio. The hotel at which I stopped was on the very verge of Lake Como, the water plashing against its stone and marble porch. On the evening of my arrival I dined at one of the tables on this porch. The lake—or rather this portion of it—is surrounded by mountain peaks, which stand out in bold silhouette against the twilight. On the other shore, a couple of miles away, the lights of Cadenabbia were beginning to glimmer on the line between the mountain base and the lake.
At a table on my left sat a party some of the members of which were speaking Italian, others French. Among them was a beautiful Italian girl. They were drinking champagne and chatting merrily, while I sat alone, wishing that I might even understand what they said. One of the men addressed a remark to me in broken English. I met him more than halfway and was invited to join the party.
That night I dreamed of the Italian girl, Signorina Alicia Jaconti. I had carried on a spirited dialogue with her at the table, our language being one-tenth Italian, one-tenth French, one-tenth English and seven-tenths pantomime. Every one who knows anything about love knows that as a donkey feeds on thistles so love thrives on difficulties. A man may make love to any girl who speaks the same tongue as himself and go to sleep at the same time. There's no incentive in it. But when a fellow and a girl have but a few dozen words in common and must "scratch gravel" to make themselves understood the little god empties his quiver before them.
Well, the next morning I hired one of those delightful little boats with which Lake Como abounds, each furnished with a canopy and soft cushions, to say nothing of a boatman to do the work, and the signorina and I went for a "promenade," as they call it there, on the water. Perhaps you think there was nothing for the boatman to do but to row. Not much. He spoke French, Italian and English, the latter a clump, while I, a college bred American, knew but one language. The signorina spoke French and Italian. So, you see, there were three tongues in the party. Before starting I slipped a lire into the boatman's palm. He thought it was to induce him to row fast. Not a bit. I had in view a different use for him. Besides, I didn't propose that he should make me and the girl ridiculous by telling people what it was. I wanted him for an interpreter.
As soon as we were off the signorina and I, leaning back on the cushions, renewed the struggle to communicate of the evening before. It ran like this: "Eet is ver bellissimo" (beautiful). "Vous n'avez pas" (you have not) "aucun" (anything) "so bellissimo in Amerique."
"Not a woman in the country so beautiful as you," I replied in four languages and a superfluity of pantomime. "Ah, m'sieur!" (Clasped hands, smiles, eyes turned upward.)
It wasn't long before I had found her hand under a fold of her dress where the boatman couldn't see and a current of language common to all people, felt, not spoken, ran between us with all the sprightliness of a bubbling brook. So for awhile we sat without speaking. The boatman jogged along over the smooth waters which splashed softly against the boat. The reflection of the mountains and the heavens trembling in the lake started me again.
"Votre yeux" (your eyes), I said. "Boatman, what's the French for reflect?"
"Reflechit," monsieur."
"Votre yeux reflechit les— What's the French for heaven?"
"Ciel," monsieur."
"Bully." Then to the girl, "Votre yeux reflechit les ciel."
"Ah, m'sieur!" The eyes went up and the hands were clasped.
Fortunately that all important word is much the same in several languages, all derived from the Latin. It is amor (love), amo (I love).
"Boatman," I began and stopped. I couldn't even bear to ask for a word at such a time. "Boatman," I began again, "what's that directly behind you?"
He turned, and I whispered with my lips close to hers:
"J'amo vol" (I love you).
And so with one letter of French, one word of Latin and one of Italian I did the trick.
The signorina is now my wife and since she lives in America has been obliged to learn English. She considers it a harsh language and entirely unfitted for lovemaking.

HOW TO SHAPE FOWLS.
You've often wished to know the trick how that other fellow gets his chickens into such compact, pretty, plump shape when you breed the same strain, feed the same grains and go to much pains, and yet he outsells you and makes larger gains.
Well, here's the tip, and it's tiptop. Your competitor gets more V's for his poultry because he presses their carcasses in a V shaped trough.
After fasting his fowls one day, that their crops and intestines may be empty to prevent their causing decay, he kills them neatly, picks them without tearing the skin, singes them over an alcohol flame and then takes the clean, warm carcass in his hands and manipulates the breast meat forward.
He presses down the breastbone, ties legs at hock and presses them against breast, folds wings and presses them against body. Breast down, the fowl is now placed in a V shaped trough, with rear of bird pressed tight up against the back board, and all the carcasses are placed the same and tight against each other.
After all are neatly arranged a smooth weighted board is placed on the fowls, and they are thus kept until perfectly cool and rigid.
If the same breed and age this gives all the carcasses a uniform, compact, pretty, plump appearance, which certainly is not lost on those who go to market with money to burn for the best.
The majority of the American people are not looking for seconds.
The agitation for pure foods and the exposure of fraud, the enactment of pure food laws and the prosecution of adulterators and vendors of impure and spoiled foodstuffs have educated the people to be critics of articles offered for food.
They want well bred, well fed, well finished, fresh fowl, and the market man of modern methods has them.
The V shaping board will increase your V's, and it only takes two V's to make an X.
FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.
The poultry class at Cornell university held a show all their own last February. They had 206 entries, and much interest was manifested.
Large fowls like Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes and Cochins do not linger long with hard crop. Better open and empty their crops early to save them.
A minister at Zionsville, Pa., looks after 1,000 church members, farms an eight acre tract, raises 2,000 chickens a year and lately built a $20,000 church. Next!
Conundrum.—If you lived near Canada, where wheat is cheap, and smuggled some across the border for bread, do you think it would be just for Uncle Sam to punish you when he allows the gamblers in the wheat pit to rob the nation?
Russia has sent a representative to this country to study poultry conditions, especially the egg and broiler side of it. This lady is visiting the big White Leghorn, Wyandotte and duck ranches in particular.
The Russian government wrote to a Pennsylvania poultryman lately, and he had to send the missive to Washington for translation. He could have avoided red tape by sending it to a coal region postmaster.
When the train from which talks on agriculture are given was making a stop at a small Pennsylvania town a boy seventeen years old entered. His mother yanked him off the train and said: "You're not going to be a farmer—not if I can avoid it. Come along home!" Did she have a brain storm? How could Abe Lincoln and George Washington engage in such an awful, awful occupation anyhow?
Rats must be thick in England, where it is claimed they cause a loss of $75,000,000 a year. If they are thick around your place make a poison vault. Put a small box containing poisoned food inside a larger closed box and have a hole in each box just large enough and high enough for a rat to enter.
If you are afraid of poison, trap or shoot rats on account of your fowls, feed them corn. When they have corn they'll not touch chicken. Corn's cheaper than chicken meat.
The solution of epidemics of "contagious diseases" is often found when a half eaten carcass is discovered. It is not a contagious disease at all, and such troubles often come simply by neglect to bury a dead chicken.
The pigeon fanciers are working hard to get separate shows for their birds, and they can't be blamed. The chicken shows are generally crowded without the pigeons, and the associations do not care to go to the extra expense of hiring a special pigeon judge. Then the caging is different also.

CONCERNING THE SILO

The cement block silo shown in the illustration was built by an Ohio dairyman, who says of it:
"It is thirty-one feet high and fifteen feet in diameter in the clear. The blocks are made of the best portland cement and washed stone and have a rock face of one-half inch, made in proportion of one part cement to two parts stone, which makes them perfectly air tight. They are made 8 by 8 by 16 inches. It took 1,690 of these blocks to build this silo.
"The particular part is to get a solid foundation. I bound the wall with a No. 9 wire between each tier of blocks. Of course the cost of a block silo depends upon the kind of material you use and distance to haul it. This silo cost me complete $225 with about fifteen days' labor, including myself and team.
"There are quite a number of them in this section, and they are giving the best results. I would not build anything else. I gave this silo a thorough coat of coal tar inside, which prevents the acid of the ensilage getting into the blocks."
Size of the Silo.
Questions are so frequently asked concerning the size of the silo needed that the following table will be of interest to those who contemplate building one or more silos this year. The average quantity of silage fed daily is placed at forty pounds. This is more nearly a maximum than an average, but it is safe to figure liberally, for it is always better to have silage left over than to run short. The average feeding season of six months is also taken into consideration in formulating this table:

No. of cows.	Estimated amount tons.	Size of silo needed.	Average acres covered.
5	30	10x16	1 to 2
10	60	10x22	2 to 3
15	90	11x24	3 to 4
20	120	12x26	4 to 5
30	180	14x30	6 to 7
35	210	15x32	7 to 8
40	240	16x34	8 to 9
45	270	17x36	9 to 10
50	300	18x38	10 to 11
55	330	19x40	11 to 12
60	360	20x42	12 to 13

An Essential of Construction.
The fundamental principle in the preservation of green forage when placed in a silo is the exclusion of air. It is the purpose of any silo regardless of its construction to exclude air as far as possible from the silage and in this way prevent decay. To prevent the air from reaching the silage all silos must have air tight walls. These must be rigid enough not to be sprung out of shape by the pressure of the silage, permitting air to enter next to the wall.
Not only the walls, but the doors also, must be perfectly air tight. To accomplish this they should be well fitted and the joints made more perfect by felt pads or gaskets. It is best when the silo door sets against a shoulder to place clay worked into the consistency of putty in the joint. The clay is placed on the bearing surface and the door placed over it, and when the pressure of the silage comes against the door an air tight joint is obtained.
The paper is successfully used by some silo owners either in strips to cover the cracks around the doors or in widths sufficient to cover the entire door and lap a few inches on the silo walls.
Treating Cowpox.
When sores on cows' teats turn to pustules and crusts the presence of cowpox or bovine variola is indicated. It is especially prevalent on newly calving heifers. Give a mild epsom salts laxative, and it will be well to thoroughly fumigate the stables with sulphur fumes and to disinfect with formaldehyde. Sometimes it may be necessary to use tubes in milking affected cows.
